The Protective Factors: Parental Resilience

The Protective Factors are strengths all families may have and can build upon that support resilient, thriving children and families. They are: parental resilience, social connections, knowledge of parenting & child development, concrete support in times of need, social & emotional competence of children, and nurturing & attachment.

These factors help to reduce stress, enhance wellbeing and positive parent-child relationships that are the foundation for healthy development in children. This month, our focus is on Parental Resilience - the ability to manage and cope well with stress, trauma, and the challenges we face as parents.

Sharing our thoughts and worries with someone we trust can help lighten our load and make challenges more bearable. It also buffers our stress from our children and models how to give and receive support, helping build up our children's resilience as well as our own. Sometimes you may need someone to talk to, other times you may provide a listening ear to someone else – giving and receiving support makes us, our families, and our community more resilient.

When We Share

When we share laughter, there's twice the fun; When we share success, we've surpassed what we've done. When we share problems, there's half the pain; When we share tears, a rainbow follows rain. When we share dreams, they become more real; When we share secrets, it's our hearts we reveal. If we share a smile, that's when our love shows; If we share a hug, that's when our love grows. If we share a hug, that's when our love grows. If we share with someone on whom we depend, that person is always family or friend. And what draws us closer and makes us all care, Is not what we have, but the things we share.

Self-Care Cup

The beginning of a new year is a good time to evaluate how our self-care is going and ways we may best support ourselves in this season. Use this page to think about things that fill and empty your cup to guide you in caring for yourself and your family. We can't pour from an empty cup.

If you're feeling like your cup is often empty, Parenting Communities home visiting can help support you a monthly gathering for families and those interested in the early childhood years to share and explore topics related to early childhood development, parenting, and our collective well-being
